Dear Mr. Schult:

We all hear about it when projects are not going smoothly, and rarely is enough said when projects exceed expectations. I just wanted to take a minute to express my gratitude for your firm's superior work completed on the Citigroup Phase IV project and to let you know that your excellent service did not go un-noticed.

I'm sure you have received letters that praise the work of your firm, in particular that of Ed and Bob Rudman, but I truly felt compelled to add more literature to the stack. Super Electric's extraordinary performance on the Citigroup job was top notch. By nature of the industry, each phase of the Citigroup project was bid out starting in 2007, so different subcontractors were utilized on the various phases. When it came to Phase IV, Super Electric's commitment surpassed my expectations as I could not have asked for more in a subcontractor. Ed and Bob were strong leaders in the field, taking on every challenge that came their way with unparalleled professionalism and enthusiasm; it was clear that the crews had the utmost respect for their leaders at Super.

The electrical subcontractor was the key trade to set the pace on the construction of the trading floors. A simple slip up would mean an unpleasant ripple effect down the schedule. Not only did Super Electric keep the pace, they set the bar high and never looked back never missing a deadline.

Thank you again for your hard work. I look forward to a solid working relationship with Super Electric.

Respectfully yours,

WIGHT & COMPANY
